Are Shareholder Lawsuits Useful or Frivolous?

Thursday, March 18, 2004, 9:00–11:00 a.m.
Wohlstetter Conference Center, Twelfth Floor, AEI
1150 Seventeenth Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20036

Critics of shareholder lawsuits argue that most of these legal actions generate more harm than good, imposing large costs on a firm and its shareholders without doing much to deter fraudulent or negligent behavior on the part of executives. This panel will present research that evaluates the effects of shareholder litigation and will offer suggestions concerning legal reforms that are likely to advance the interests of shareholders.

8:45 a.m. Registration

9:00 Panelists: ERIC HELLAND, President's Council of Economic Advisers and Claremont McKenna College
ADAM PRITCHARD, University of Michigan Law School

Discussant: MICHAEL PERINO, St. John's University School of Law

Moderator: JONATHAN KLICK, AEI and Florida State University College of Law

11:00 Adjournment

I will attend the shareholder event on Thursday, March 18.
