

Making America Safer: Reforming Congress for the Post-9/11 Era

Tuesday, February 15, 2005, 10:00-11:30 a.m.
Wohlstetter Conference Center, Twelfth Floor, AEI
1150 Seventeenth Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20036

Last December, in response to recommendations made by the 9/11 Commission, the 108th Congress passed a historic reorganization of the U.S. government's intelligence and counterterrorism agencies. In its final report, the Commission also recommended a dramatic overhaul of Congressional oversight of those agencies. AEI congressional scholar Norman Ornstein will moderate a panel discussion on the role of the 109th Congress in meeting the greatest national security challenge facing the United States: Islamist terrorism. Topics will include executive restructuring and committee jurisdiction, providing effective oversight of intelligence and homeland security, and the 9/11 Commission's recommendations on Congress.

9:45 a.m. Registration

10:00 Panelists: LEE H. HAMILTON, 9/11 Public Discourse Project
EDWIN MEESE III, Heritage Foundation
THOMAS MANN, Brookings Institution
RICHARD COHEN, National Journal

Moderator: NORMAN J. ORNSTEIN, AEI

11:30 Adjournment
